

Training your pet

Most pets will learn to use a pet door almost at once but there are a few which may be a bit nervous at first. The following tips will help your pet take full advantage of the freedom and comfort a pet door can bring:

- The most important rule is to be patient with your pet. Let your animal work out for itself that it can go in and out of doors. Don't force them through the flap or they may become frightened.
- Many pet owners install pet doors when they move house. If this applies to you, make sure your pet is familiar with their surroundings before you fit the pet door - pets can develop long lasting fears in unfamiliar surroundings.
- Once you have installed your pet door leave it propped open. You can do this by using a long strip of masking tape - fixing one end of the tape to the flap and the other to the surface above. Let your pet become familiar with it and go in and out freely.
- Establish a motive for your pet to use the door. The obvious one is food. First feed the pet near your door, inside and then near the door outside. Repeat as often as you need to. It is not a good idea to use the lock for your pet door until your pet is thoroughly familiar with using the door.

Pet doors provide pets with a greater freedom of choice

Safety and responsibility

Our pet doors have been manufactured to be as safe as possible for pets. Moving house is a common time for pet owners to install a pet door. If this applies to you, please ensure your pet is familiar with their surroundings before you fit the pet door as pets can develop long lasting fears with unfamiliar surroundings.

If installing a pet door for your dog, please ensure that your surrounding garden or outside area is secure to avoid problems with roaming or leaving your premises. Likewise with your cat it is your responsibility to ensure his safety will not be compromised by going outside. Manually operated pet doors will not prevent unwanted animals or people including children from passing through (either in or out) the pet door.

Pet Door

Does your pet get the freedom they need?

Does my pet need a Pet Door?

Pet Doors provide you with a portal between two different environments, indoors and outdoors. This gives pets a greater freedom of choice and extends the area over which they can self-exercise and explore. Pets benefit from increased exercise, fresh air and opportunities to investigate, fulfilling innate requirements and stimulating them psychologically.

If the weather deteriorates, or if your pet wants to avoid danger, it can gain entry to the safety of your home whenever it wishes. If you are wary of allowing strays into your home, determining the level of security and access you require from your Pet Door is essential. You can have the peace of mind that your pet door will admit only your pet and deny entry to others dependant upon the model you select.

Sometimes it is not a good idea to allow your pet unsupervised access into your garden. If cats are kept indoors at all times then owners have an obligation to either provide them with a stimulating interior environment or investigate the benefits of an outdoor containment system.

Why should I use a Pet Door?

Undoubtedly your pet will benefit physically and psychologically from the freedom that a Pet Door can offer them. Your pet is free to come and go as it pleases - to come into the comfort of their home or to go out into the garden and play, all without the need to trouble you.

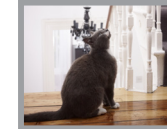

Pet Doors generally provide different degrees of freedom, depending on whether your pet is a cat or a dog. Cats generally use Pet Doors to access an area which may extend beyond the boundaries of their 'territory' or garden into their neighbourhood. Dogs however, generally use a Pet Door if their owners have secured the boundaries of their garden.

Acceptable behaviour outdoors is not necessarily acceptable behaviour indoors and it is important that our pets have the opportunity to differentiate between the two environments.

What are the benefits of a Pet Door

- Convenience for you - You can come and go as you please, without the thought of having to be around at regular intervals to let your pet in or out of your home.
- Convenience for your pet - No more disturbed mornings or nights, as a pet door gives the freedom for them to come and go as they please without having to wait for you to let them in or out.
- Hygiene - No more unsightly scratch marks on your doors or unpleasant pet mess inside your home.
- Security - You can have peace of mind that your pet door will admit only your pet and deny entry to strays dependant upon which model you choose. No longer do you have to leave a window or door open or worry as to whether your pet is safely inside your home.

This ensures your pet can enjoy controlled freedom and still have access to your home. Your pet will enjoy a healthier, happier lifestyle.
